

Topic: Should Children Have Homework on Weekends?

For the motion:

Good morning, teachers and friends. I am speaking for the motion that children should have homework on weekends.

Homework on weekends helps us remember what we learned in class. If we forget on Saturday, we will be slower on Monday. Just ten or fifteen minutes of practice keeps everything fresh in our heads. It is not a lot of time, but it makes the next school week easier. My maths teacher says the students who do their weekend homework always understand the new lessons faster.

For these reasons, I support the motion. Thank you.

Against the motion:

Good morning, teachers and friends. I am speaking against the motion that children should have homework on weekends.

The weekend is for resting, family time, and play. Children study five days a week. Two days off is not too much. If we have homework on weekends, we get tired before the new week even starts. Tired children do not learn well. Doctors say children need free time to be healthy and to grow up creative. Free play is also a way of learning, just a different way.

For these reasons, I oppose the motion. Thank you.
